Mrs. Payne Whitney's Letterman, which finished far in the ruck in the cuessic, left here early in the day. My lay, the full brother of Man o' War, belonging to Edward Simms, was due to ship to New York to-night, but he was sore. Jim McClelland decided to leave him here for a few days. He pulled up lame after running in second place for three-quarters of a mile. He spread a hoof and this morning was unable to come out of his stall. Although sericusly injured My Play will race again. McClelland said he expected the hoof to mend in a few weeks.

Princeton Regatta Held Under Fluke-Proof Rules

AST Saturday's regatta at Princeton was rowed under the most sportsmanlike arrangement ever made for an intercollegiate competition. The accident recall agreement, which was drawn up by Joe Wright of Pennsylvania, was the finest thing of its kind yet devised and precluded victories on flukes.

It was agreed that if any crew had any accident with its oars or riggers or its shells, any trouble other than with sliding seats—in the first half mile the race was to be started over again. This was in sharp contrast with the old accident recall, which held good for only thirty seconds after the start.
